Detective J. C. Day of the Dallas Police Department holds aloft the bolt-action rifle with telescopic sights that was used to kill President Kennedy and wound Texas Gov. John Connally. Weapon was found in building on motorcade route.

The new President, Lyndon B. Johnson, his wife beside him, makes some brief remarks at Andrews Air Force Base in Washington, Friday night. He told the reporters, "I will do my best. That is all that I can do."

The grief of a nation and of the world is reflected in the tears of this little girl who offers a prayer for the slain President outside the Parkland Hospital in Dallas, Tex., where he died Friday.

Marching Marines lead a procession on the White House grounds early Saturday as the body of President John F. Kennedy, slain by a sniper's bullet Friday in Dallas, Tex., is taken to the executive mansion where it is now in repose. The body will lie in state at the Capitol on Sunday where the public will be able to pay its respects.

Stark headlines on the home edition of The Denver Post Friday told to a stunned populace the story of the death of President Kennedy. The reaction was shock, disbelief and anger at the tragic news. Residents gathered at newsstands and read in silence details of the slaying.
